

START HERE

Are you married or in a civil partnership?

Yes

Is your estate worth more than £250,000?

Yes

Do you have any living children or any children who have predeceased you leaving children or remoter issue?

Yes

Your spouse/civil partner takes the first £250,000, your personal chattels and half the balance absolutely. The rest is held on statutory trusts for those of your children who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your children who have predeceased you.

No

Do you have any living children or any children who have predeceased you leaving children or remoter issue?

No

Do you have a living parent?

No

Do you have any living siblings who have predeceased you leaving children (your nephews or nieces) or remoter issue?

No

Do you have any living half siblings or half siblings who have predeceased you leaving children or remoter issue?

No

Do you have any living grandparents?

No

Do you have any living aunts or uncles or aunts or uncles who have predeceased you leaving children or remoter issue?

No

Do you have any living half aunts or uncles or half aunts or uncles who have predeceased you leaving children or remoter issue?

No

The Crown, Duchy of Lancaster or Duke of Cornwall takes your entire estate.

Yes

Your estate is held on statutory trusts for those of your children who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your children who have predeceased you.

Yes

Your estate is shared equally between your parents or if one parent has predeceased you, your estate goes to your surviving parent.

Yes

Your estate is held on statutory trusts for those of your siblings who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your siblings who have predeceased you.

Yes

Your estate is held on statutory trusts for those of your half siblings who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your half siblings who have predeceased you.

Yes

Your estate is shared equally between your surviving grandparents (if only one of your grandparents survives you, your estate goes to that survivor)

Yes

Your estate is held on statutory trusts for those of your aunts and uncles who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your aunts and uncles who have predeceased you.

Yes

Your estate is held on statutory trusts for those of your half aunts and uncles who have survived you and the issue alive at your death of those of your half aunts and uncles who have predeceased you.

myers&co
solicitors